GREAT BRITAIN'S PROTEST

It is announced from official circles in Washington that Great Britain will protest against American annexation of the Hawaiian islands and the British newspapers take a very high tone and demand that the government do not permit the United States to annex Hawaii.

Such a protest comes with rather a bad grace from a nation with England's annexation record, and especially just at this time, when the British government has just virtually annexed Egypt, despite the protests of the nominal ruler of the country, and of the French government. The French interests in Egypt are far greater than the British interests in Hawaii, but ever since the bombardment of Alexandria, nearly eleven years ago, Egypt has been really a dependency of England.

Consistency, however, is not a British virtue, when British interests are involved, and we may expect as loud a protest from Lord Rosebery as though England had not acquired the bulk of all her possessions in the four quarters of the globe by forcible annexation.

It is to the credit of our Congressmen [illegible] so far from frightening them, seem to be additional arguments for decided action on the part of our government.

SENATOR FELKER'S TRIBUTE TO BLAINE.

It was fitting that the legislature of Colorado, a State that was devoted to Mr Blaine, and which delegates at every national Republican convention for six years strongly urged his nomination for the Presidency, should pause in its work on the day of his obsequies and pay a tribute of respect to his memory. It is fortunate, too, that such an orator as Senator Felker should have been at hand to make the principal speech of the occasion. At such a time eulogy is proper, and none felt that the great statesman was overpraised as his eulogist [illegible]

"With the blood of revolutionary sires running in his veins he was always and everywhere a true representative American. And it can with truth be said of him that his chief and most prominent characteristic was his love and exalted admiration of American. Since his introduction into the field of diplomacy as Secretary of state in President Garfield's cabinet, he has been the most widely known American in foreign lands. Equipped with a thorough knowledge of international law, he became at once the ranking genius among the diplomatists of the world.

"Entering an arena noted for its intrigues, secret cabals and political chicanery, and unmindful of foreign pronunciamentos, he stripped off the guise of flimsy pretext, and by his profound knowledge, masterly arguments and incisive logic commanded alike the fear and admiration of the trained diplomats of the Old World, added tone and dignity to the executive department of his own government, and clearly shaped defined and established the international code with a distinctive American policy.

"Beloved of the people, ever true to the best interests of the people, loved by the people he is to-day mourned by the people as no other American has been since the summons of Henry Clay came to that great commoner, Henry Clay.

We congratulate Senator Felker, we congratulate the legislature and the State of Colorado, on this splendid tribute to a statesman, who, whatever his faults may have been, was an American of whose genius and whose public service all Americans may well be proud.

THE PURE WATER.

The citizens of Colorado Springs know already that their water supply is one of the best in the world, but it is pleasant to have the fact recognized by expert authority. In the New York Evening Post of January 24 we find the following statement

John Davis, Fellow of the Royal Microscopic Society of England, told a San Francisco reporter that he was examining the water of all the large cities in the world in search of new specimens of animal and vegetable impurities. In the United States he found the purest water at Colorado Springs and the impurest at Sacramento.

It should be added, for the benefit of eastern people, that Colorado Springs has not only the purest water in the country, but the finest climate, the most perpetual sunshine, the pleasantest temperature, the least snow of any city not semi tropical, and no slush at all. As these facts become more generally known we may expect an increasing number of eastern people to come and make their homes in our city.

A COUP D'ETAT PREVENTED

We are indebted to Col. De La Vergne for a copy of the Hawaiian Gazette of Jan 18 containing a full account of the revolution and the causes thereof, part of which we reprint to-day. Perhaps the most important item of news is that the new Provisional Government has been recognized, not only by Minister Stevens, but by the representatives of Germany, Austria, Sweden, Belgium, Russia, the Netherlands and China. This includes all the important nations except Great Britain, France, Spain, Italy and Portugal, and in principle matters considerably. If the acts of the Provisional Government are endorsed by the nations first named, England will think a great many times before adopting extreme measures for the present, at least, of annexation.

As for France the act of Queen Liliuokalani was like the act of Louis Napoleon on Dec. 2, 1851, only here was not a snowy ful. What Frenchman who is loyal to the Republic would not have hailed as patriots any body of men who should have prevented the usurpation, and how can they condemn the men in Hawaii who have succeeded in preserving their liberty and their property by forming a provisional government?

It may be interesting to our citizens to know that Asheville, N. C., which seems to be buried in snow for a week at a time, is growing to throw out and become slushy and muddy. As a health resort for winter, Asheville just now presents a great contrast to Colorado Springs.

The prompt action of the Sheriff of Chautauqua County at Dunkirk has nipped the incipient riot in the bud. The strike is now thought to be all over. Score one for law and order.

A Tribute to Bishop Brooks.

The first and strongest impression produced upon the minds of people generally when they first read or heard of the death of Bishop Brooks was one of personal sorrow, intensified by the terrible suddenness with which death had come. [illegible]

[illegible]

Here lay a life poised and ready for flight from her great restlessness. When would the giants come again? Should she be able to escape them? These were a part of her thoughts. And part were that the giants came just as the snow comes with no care for the hearts it might chill. No, she thought, the snow does not laugh and cheer at our hunger and cold, while the giants follow us still with delight, eager for the scent of blood.

Again the giants came. The woman fled. But she dared not try the open stretch ahead. They would surely see her. She lay flat on the ground that they might pass her by. On came the hooting troop. To flee was the only hope. She is gone. They see her, the giants and their dreaded beasts. A great cheer is raised and howl by giants and beasts. That one lone woman's heart beats as it would pound down its walls. Through the cleft air she hurries on. Terror adds speed to her flying feet. Why does she flee? Is life then so dear though friends are gone and the dread over with her? No. It is not a race for life but from terror. She is weak. The race is not long. The beasts are close now, and they are bloodthirsty as their masters. She makes a turn, gains a few paces, then is seized. The white teeth [illegible] everything heart, just as the giants themselves ride up. As she dies her heart gathers itself and gives one leap of joy. Why the joy? One of the giants present at the death is a woman young, fair face fair as the face of the world, eyes lustrous like those of the dying victim. The two pairs of eyes met each other, the glance was for an instant, but the dying woman knew there was one person there among the giants who understood—and she would make others understand. For the giants were a good-hearted race, only slow to understand.

The prophetic dying ecstasy was true.

This was years ago, but rabbits are not chased on the plains now though they live there, for there were others not very far away. You may now and then see one of the glad things bounding over the buried stretch as you ride along. — T

A Difference in Rabbits

COLORADO SPRINGS, Jan 31, 1893.

To the Editor of THE GAZETTE:

SIR—The Humane society has never interfered with hunting the rabbit in its wild state, where it is at home and knows every place of refuge, but when brought from another state or other part of the country, and—half-tamed by confinement—it is turned out for the dogs to tear to pieces before the eyes of the "sportsmen," or when it is turned into an inclosure full of dogs to kill, it is surely time for interference. Bringing rabbits from Kansas to Colorado to enjoy the sight of their death here does not help to exterminate them in Colorado. Your correspondent "X" is either unaware of what constitutes the real sport of coursing or wilfully misleads. FRANCIS B. HILL Sec'y.

Carried Out His Oath.

"John A. Morris the big lottery man, who also owns Morris park New York, is vindictive," said W. T. Harris, of New Orleans, at the Lindell. "Several years ago he came to New Orleans penniless. In a little while he made enough money to buy him some good clothes. His next effort was to enter society. He failed. Then he tried to join the Jockey club but his application was blackballed by the members. He waxed warm and swore that he would convert the grounds and the race track into a graveyard but no one paid any attention to his talk. Time wore on and finally Morris became the principal owner of the Louisiana lottery. Instead of being a 'tout' at the race tracks, a vocation that he at one time followed he was a millionaire. He walked about the streets of the Crescent City as unpretentious as a man could. He avoided all notoriety and [illegible] to [illegible] solitude.

"One morning about fifteen years ago the daily paper of New Orleans imparted the information that Morris had bought the Jockey club grounds. The next day he made his purposes public. In an interview with a reporter he said: 'When I was blackballed by the Jockey club several years ago I made a solemn oath that I would convert their grounds into a graveyard. That is what I bought it for. The city owns it now, for I have just finished making a deed to the municipality tendering them the use of the grounds for a graveyard and for no other purpose.'

"Consequently the beautiful race track that existed almost in the heart of the city a decade ago is now Metairie cemetery, the prettiest one in the south." —St. Louis Republic.

A Writing Desk for the Blind

A most ingenious and humane device has been invented by Dr Slater for enabling the blind to better transfer their thoughts to writing. The invention is a writing desk which consists essentially of a light frame slightly wider than the paper to be written upon, but more than twice its length. A metallic rod runs across the frame holding the paper in its place and acting as a guide to the finger of the writer in moving his hand straight across the paper. Along this rod slides a thimblelike slipper into which the third or fourth finger of the hand may be placed by the writer who is thus enabled to mark any position on the line, or to keep a fixed position for his hand while moving along the rod and if he has any occasion to stop in the middle of his work he will always be able to recommence exactly in the same place.

In the face of one side of the frame notches are cut corresponding with the spaces between the lines, and when one line has been written the writer places the left forefinger in the first notch and moves up the paper slide with his thumb until it stops against his forefinger when the paper will be in position for the writing of the next line. Upon the slide at the left hand is a brass bar by touching which with the point of the pen or pencil the writer can determine the point of elevating.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Thirteen at Dinner

It is an old superstition that if thirteen sit at a table together one of them will die within the year. The origin of this superstition is traced to the last Lord Lyon. It is here said that on the occasion of his last visit the steamship Victoria, with hundreds of persons, sat at the captain's table.

The narrator, a young, who tell the strange tale, that the ship's commander noticed this fact, and the end of the meal and turning to the [illegible] arose from his seat and fairly staggered from the room.

How much of this is superstition but whether the story is true or not the celebrated [illegible] of New York has triumphed over the superstition with this [illegible] under and in spite of several terrible [illegible] have been particularly fortunate in having no skeleton sit at the table, notwithstanding the fact that thirteen is the number of persons required to gather round the festal board and their menu cards are illuminated with such cheerful emblems as skulls and crossbones, coffins and the like.—New York News.

Webster's Last Words.

The statesman, it has so gone into history and his last words are accepted that Webster's last words were, "I still live."

A [illegible] who was present at the death bed of Webster and state [illegible] contradicts the accepted version. His [illegible] that shortly before his death Webster feebly articulated, "I still live," and in a minute or so after, almost in the same breath, Webster whispered so low that it was hardly audible, "Give me more brandy." This seems quite probable as life had been kept in the dying man by the aid of stimulants for some time, and Webster knew it and knew that that alone could keep him alive.—New York Herald.

He Was No Prodigy

Lieutenant Duval tells some funny stories of his military experiences. One of them happened when little Josef Hoffman was giving concerts in this country. Here is the story.

I was in command of my company drilling the men in skirmish drill by bugle call. I was putting in the orders in a pretty lively manner—Advance—retreat—fire—lie down—rally by fours. A very stout man in my immediate front was doing his best to keep up with the procession—firing, rallying, etc., but the bugle calls were too many for him. He had no ear for music. Finally as the order was played, "Rally by fours," he laid down and commenced firing. I said, "Here! What are you about? Don't you understand the bugle calls?"

"Yes," he replied, "but I'm no Josef Hoffman." That broke up the drill.—New York World.

The Number Two.

In many of the legends of the North American Indians two witches or nine women play a conspicuous part. This may be merely a curious coincidence, but more probably it is the result of some half forgotten superstition connected with the number two.

In the Old World two has an evil representation and so far as monarchs have been concerned it certainly seems to have been an unlucky number, most of those who were second of a name having had troubled reigns or met with untimely fates.—New York News.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

Prevents hair from falling out.

"A number of years ago, by recommendation of a friend, I began to use Ayer's Hair Vigor to stop the hair from falling out and prevent its turning gray. The first effects were most satisfactory. Occasional applications since have kept my hair thick and of a natural color." —H. E. Basham, Mckinney, Texas.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

Restores hair after fevers.

"Over a year ago I had a severe fever and when I recovered my hair began to fall out and what little remained turned gray. I tried various remedies but without success till at last I began to use Ayer's Hair Vigor and now my hair is growing rapidly and is restored to its original color." —Mrs. A. Collins, Dighton, Mass.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

STATE NEWS

A Boulder man has shipped to St Louis a trifle over thirteen tons of onions. Of these nine tons were raised by one man on a little less than three-quarters of an acre of ground.

Two students at the School of Mines at Golden have discovered the remains of a large mammoth on Hoisin Creek. A large tooth, which in endeavoring to get out was broken in two pieces, is on exhibition at the school. The tooth is sixteen inches long by six inches in breadth and contains over thirty ridges.

About five dozen California quail were turned loose near the depot by Ben Kiefer Monday afternoon. These are part of the number purchased by the county commissioners. There will be more of them shipped to this point later and some will be of a different species found in the east, very much unlike the California bird except in size. The public are warned not to shoot or otherwise destroy these birds as there is a penalty of $20 fine for each offense. It is hoped that no one will ignore the law. These quail are sent here to preserve our trees by destroying the large insects.—Fruita Mail.

[illegible] McMullin of Grand Junction, W. M. Bettinger of Washington D. C. and Henry C. Allen of Philadelphia were in town last Saturday. The last two gentlemen were here to invest in some land for fruit culture. They both expressed themselves as very much pleased with this end of the valley and were quite positive that they would seek an investment in this immediate vicinity. Mr. Bettinger, who is stopping at Colorado Springs for his health, is a well to do lumber merchant of Washington, D. C., while Mr. Allen is a law student and staff correspondent for the American Financier of Chicago, also representative of eastern investors. It is trusted that the gentlemen will not alter their determination relative to an investment in Fruita.—Fruita Mail.

The Holland American Land and Improvement company has contracted for 30,000 acres of land near Sterling in the lower Platte valley for $[illegible] 000. Messrs. Nesbitt, Wonder, Hodge and Zoutman acted for the company in negotiating the deal. The property was purchased by a syndicate composed chiefly of Dutch people. It is the intention of the Holland company to settle several hundred thousand colonists on the tract and some will be taken from the present colony in the San Luis valley. The land, though in the rain belt, is country and [illegible] the former owners having spent thousands of dollars in improving it. The soil is of great fertility and the ditch has been constructed early as a preventive in case of [illegible] Denver Republican.

[illegible] Hon. C. D. Bennet left Denver for the east at the last regular meeting of the board of trade. Before leaving the city he gave to a representative of the company a plan for [illegible]. A large body of colonists are now being organized in Holland and will come to this country in the 11th and 12th of February. They will be settled on the lands just purchased by the company in the Platte valley, twelve miles northeast of Denver. The tract will be broken up into forty and eighty acre farms and all improvements made to induce profitable settlement.—Denver Republican.

POPULATION OF COLORADO SPRINGS

A. D. 1900 — 10,000.

There is no reason why the rate of increase will not be as great as for the past seven years. It ought to be greater. The city will then cover three times the territory it does at present.

DOES ANYONE DOUBT

That in seven years the value of every foot of ground in and around the city will have doubled? Well! that is better than 10 per cent compound interest. A superb investment! Colorado Springs real estate is the best gold mine you can strike. It has always paid good dividends.

SHAMEFUL EXHIBIT.

INSTALLING THE EXHIBITS.

Many World's Fair Novelties Already Placed in Jackson Park.

[Special correspondence.]

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—Some of the World's fair buildings are already beginning to receive their exhibits, and what with the shrill hooting and whistling of the locomotives, the creaking of the machinery, the straining of the floors as these iron horses of commerce laboriously pull their heavy loads up the long sides, and the shouts and yells of a small army of workmen, the scenes and sounds in sections of Jackson park just now seem very much like confusion confounded. It is a great task, that of properly installing the hundreds of thousands of exhibits that are to come from near and far, from our own domain and from the uttermost ends of the earth.

Something like 12,000 carloads of exhibits are to arrive within the next ninety days, over 130 a day, and the contents of every car, whether they be fragile materials that can be handled by a child or ponderous machinery that will call into requisition the services of the big cranes that have been erected, must be unloaded and placed in proper position by the 1st day of May. This of itself will be a feat. There are railroad people of experience who say that it will be impossible of accomplishment, and who insist that a month or so from now, when exhibitors will begin to make up for lost time and cars loaded up with exposition freight to a total of 200 or 400 a day, come knocking for admittance at the gates, there will be a blockade, and everything will be at sixes and sevens.

But the management, which so far has steered the exposition craft through smooth waters, insists that there will be nothing of the kind; that the wheels of the machinery, both human and mechanical, have been thoroughly greased, and that everything will move as slick and with as much dispatch as though there were no roofs upon the buildings and each exhibit was lowered from the clouds to its proper place. And by the time the first day of the month of flowers is to see everything in readiness, in decency and in good order.

It is a pretty miscellaneous collection with which to inaugurate the work of the installation department, and the appearance of it doesn't inspire the spectator with any particular degree of enthusiasm. Possibly this is because considerable surroundings—crowds, music and the dash and splash of the waters of the big fountains are lacking. But possibly the same exhibits that look very prosy just now will be found actually enchanting when inspected through rose colored glasses next summer. This collection of anatomical models from Bremen, for instance, consigned for the time being to an out of the way corner, may prove a strong attraction to hundreds and thousands of lesser or greater lights in the medical world. And here, bright and early, is a model of the Geldin court, which has occupied many months in its long journey. That score or more of cases over yonder are filled with antiquities and works of art and came from Rome. In some of them there are many choice treasures, and that is why a watchman is always standing guard in the neighborhood.

Before and behind us, to right and left, scattered around in woodwork from Toronto, models from Paris, sundry monster cases from Sweden, hampers of plants and evergreens from Japan—some of them, it is said, from a garden in which Edwin Arnold and those Japanese maidens of whom he has proved so valiant a champion, have in times gone by played blindman's buff. Those funny looking things off to the south are models of Chinese boats that came direct from Hong Kong. Alongside of them, as if to promote a spirit of fraternity, are two large hauda canoes from southwestern Alaska. New South Wales gets the banner of honor as the first foreign country to make very much of a show. Twelve carloads of this exhibit were on the grounds before the year was a week old. The majority were intended for the mining building and are now in process of installation under the personal supervision of the commissioners from the colony.

Over in the Horticultural building are three immense vases, each large enough to hold four men of medium size. They are rude in construction and made of hardly perfectly burnt clay, but they will be a great center of attraction a few months hence, for the placard attached to them will tell that their history began about the time Christ came on earth. This gilt figure, peeping out of a nest of straw, represents Hoei, the Japanese god of poetry, and which the natives regard as a sacred bird, symbolic of happiness and eternal beatitude. Its wings will soon be extended over the gateway that leads to the Japanese exhibit of silk. [illegible]
